UK Outlook for Friday 7 May 2021 to Sunday 16 May 2021:
Unsettled conditions dominate with sunny spells and scattered showers, often wintry in the north over high ground, but many places staying dry on Friday. Cloud spreading from the southwest later, bringing outbreaks of heavy rain across most parts of the UK, into and through the weekend with strong winds. Perhaps remaining cold with showers across Scotland. Thereafter likely remaining unsettled with showers or spells of rain across the UK but gradually becoming drier from the west later with lighter winds. The best of any spells of fine and dry weather will likely be later in this period towards the south, interspersed with unsettled periods of showers and spells of rain from the northwest. Temperatures likely to be colder than normal for most, especially in the north but trending towards normal.
